The ancient art of liuli has, in recent years, been given a new lease on life. Liuli is Chinese glass artwork, a craft that has been around since the 11th century BC. Creating these beautiful glass ornaments, tableware, and jewelry is an incredibly complicated and time-consuming process, demanding great technical skill and patience. However, the results are delicate, elegant crystal works, each one impossible to replicate and each one unique.

Liuli stands out because of its many bright colors. The technique employed by liuli artisans is referred to as “pâte-de-verre,” or lost-wax casting, in which a glass powder is mixed with colorants and fired at exceptionally high temperatures. Because each model can only be used once and the colors can vary so much, every individual liuli craftwork is truly one of a kind.

Pale green liuli beads date back to the Western Zhou Dynasty, and liuli handicrafts flourished during the Tang Dynasty, when the word liuli became popular. By the 19th century, this glass casting technique was no longer practiced. It wasn't until 1968, when the earliest example of “pâte-de-verre” was discovered in China, that archaeologist realized that liuli was an artform founded in China. The discovery drove local artists to revive the tradition.

None has done more to reinstate liuli than Loretta Hui-shan Yang and Chang Yi. In 1987, they established a small company named Liuligongfang and opened a workshop in Tamshui. Without any experience at all, Yang was determined to ensure that this Chinese tradition would not be lost forever. After massive investment and much trial and error, Liuligongfang finally found its feet, and Yang and Chang built up a reputation as the founders of contemporary Chinese glass art. There are now almost 70 Liuligongfang galleries, and some of their artworks form part of internationally renowned museums' permanent collections. For Liuligongfang founders, each individual artifact should capture the history of liuli. At the same time, Liuligongfang strives to give a modern twist to this ancient art.

71 What happened when the earliest example of “pâte-de-verre” was discovered in 1968?

- (A) The price of liuli works quickly began to drop.
- (B) Most artists showed little interest in the art form.
- (C) Many tourists began to visit China to see these works.
- (D) Many artists in China began to create liuli works.

72 Which of the following statements about liuli is NOT true?

- (A) It is extremely difficult to do and can take a lot of time.
- (B) Liuli artists often use many different colors to liven up their works.
- (C) Once the technique is mastered, it is easy to copy other liuli works.
- (D) It almost disappeared because people stopped practicing the art form.

73 How can we best describe the history of Liuligongfang?

- (A) It was opened by experienced craftsmen.
- (B) The company was shaky at first, but then it became successful.
- (C) The company did well at first, but then it had troubles later on.
- (D) It immediately became famous when it was founded in 1987.

- 74 According to the article, what are the founders of Liuligongfang trying to achieve with their work?
- (A) They aim to blend the past of liuli with current ideas.
(B) They hope to make liuli works more affordable for common people.
(C) They want to simplify the process of liuli so it can be produced faster.
(D) They encourage liuli artists to try and replicate works from the Zhou Dynasty.
- 75 What would be the most suitable title for this article?
- (A) Chinese Glass Artwork (B) The Intricate Art of Liuli
(C) The History of Liuligongfang (D) Contemporary Technique of Glass Casting

This is my first time volunteering at an organic farm in Taiwan. I have learnt a lot about organic farming principles, with the help of the farm owners: Vincent and Sally. Vincent is passionate about organic farming. During our stay at this farm, we have learnt about the basics of organic farming that includes soil management, crop rotation and weed management. From city dwellers who knew little about growing crops, we slowly gained a better understanding of organic farming with Vincent's patient teaching. Sally is in charge of the sales and marketing, as well as the domestic affairs of the family. Whenever we were working hard at the fields, Sally never failed to take care of our welfare by reminding us to wear sunscreen. She also provided us with essential energy by whipping up delicious meals for us. During break times, Sally also shared her thoughts about the work at this farm, previous visitors at this farm and even the life experiences that she had gained in her previous job as a human resource manager. Together, Vincent and Sally often organize organic farming classes and farming tours to help educate the public about the ins and outs of it. We are deeply impressed by the amount of dedication and effort which they have invested into this organic farm: Vincent, for his extensive knowledge of organic farming; Sally, for her cheery attitude and ability to make you feel at home. With that, we would like to thank them for helping to make our stay in Taiwan an enjoyable and rewarding journey.
